

Sam Quintelier

Brussels Airport

Sam Quintelier joined the Brussels Airports cargo team in the summer of 2018 as cargo business development manager. As Brussels Airport has a strategic focus on pharmaceutical, perishable, live animals and e-commerce for the coming years Sam fits right in. His current projects include, among other things, upscaling the perishable management app, establishing the new Animal Inspection and Care facility and digitizing the Live Animal flows at Brussels Airport.

Sam obtained a bachelor's degree in logistics management and afterwards graduated from the University of Leuven with a master's degree in Public Management and policy. After graduating he started working for a travel agency as marketing director but after two years he went back to his first love: aviation. Sam gained his first airfreight experience at Panalpina-Adelantex as business unit head of Special Logistics where he encountered perishables, live animals and special cargo and their specific needs.
